The Fidelity and Casualty Company Says It Will Not Lose a Cent-Gookin An-Not Run Away-He Speculated a Little

in Wall Street. The mists have cleared from about the affairs of Cashier Allen S. Gookin, of the Manhattan Elevated Railway, and the first estimate of the shortage in his accounts with that Company has dwindled and faded until to-day Vice-President Seward, of the Fidelity and Casualty Company, sureties for Gookin, is enabled to say that the railway company and the Fidelity will not lose a cent.

As cashier, Gookin received the daily receipts at the various stations of the several branches of the "L" system, and they amount to from $30,000 to $35,000 per diem.

At the same time the Auditor received the statements of the ticket-sellers of the number of tickets sold, and when the totals were prepared, both officers turned in their reports to Treasurer McWilliams.

Gookin had been in the employ of the Company since 1879, when he came to New York well recommended by an iron company whose employee he had been, and took a position as ticket agent on the "L."

He was then under $200 bonds. He gradually rose till in 1881 he was made cashier and paymaster of the system.

Then his bond was increased to $10,000, and as the business of the Company doubled up his bond was increased to $20,000 in the up his bond was increased to $20,000 in the Fidelity and Casualty Company, which has a contract with a London Company whereby the latter assumes half of each of the risks taken by the former.

The Manhattan system has many checks and hindrances to defaulting employees, and it would be impossible for its cashier to run away with more than one day's receipts except by systematic fraud in the way of forged chers for money paid as wages to fictitious vouchers for money paid as wages to fictitious employees.

Gookin lived in Nyack with his mother, wife and two children. He is thirty-eight years of age, and was in perfect confidence with the Company until last Tuesday.

Then he informed Treasurer McWilliams that his accounts were inaccurate and that there was a shortage to the Company. Then he walked to the offices of the Fidelity and Casnalty Company and told the Vice-President that he was in trouble with the Company.

Company.

"I am apparently short in my accounts $10,000," he said, humbly. "But I know that I canuot really be short more than half that sum. I think I can arrange my affairs so as to make it all up to the Company if 1 am given an opportunity."

Mr. Gookin was given an opportunity. He has some property, including his Nyack residence, and in the language of Mr. Seward: "He has done the upright thing. He has done what he could to repair the damage. He has not run away, but has stayed here and risked criminal arrest and prosecution, and we have every reason to believe, indeed have not only his word but that of his reputable friends that he will be able to settle his shortage."

shortage."
"In case Gookin fails to make restitution, shall the Fidelity proceed criminally against him?" asked an EVENING WORLD reporter.
"That is hardly a fair question," Vice-Prasident Saward replied. "We believe he will make restitution. That is enough for the present."

will make restitution. That is enough for the present."

Gookin is a man of good habits, but it is intimated that he has been dabbling in Wall street; that he has been on the wrong side of the market and has falsified his accounts to meet his margins; that this robbing Peter to pay Paul has finally got him into this scrape. In the year during which Director Hopkins, of the Guarantee Company of North America was receiver for the L, the bonds of the employees of the system were transferred to that Company, and their report of Gookin's antecedents and record was excellent. His malary as cashier was about $2,060 a year.

The Fidelity guarantees the 700 ticket agents and gatemen of the "L" for $250 each, and losses by shortage or defalcation are very slight.

Assistant Cashier Walter Marcus has been promoted to Mr. Gookin's place as cashier.

IMPROJATE TO THE EVENING WORLD, I POTOMEREPSIE, N. Y., Feb. 9.-The Quak ers of the Orthodox Friends Society of this city were in court again this morning, continuing their efforts to obtain $6,000 more from the estate of Mathew Vassar, ir.

They had been given $1,000 as a settlement of an alleged clerical error in the will seeming to give seven churches of this city $7,000 cach.

The executors claimed, however, that the change meant $1,000 to each church, or $7,000 to all. This morning O. H. Booth, one of the executors of the will, testified that Mathew Vassar, jr.'s, personal estate amounted to $700,000 and the real estate to $60,000. Final argument in the case will occur next Saturday.

On Monday next Surrogate Hufcut will be asked to admit the will of John Guy Vassar to probate. John Guy Vassar left real and personal property amounting to between two and three million dollars, and it will be the largest estate administered upon in the Dutchess County Surrogate Court. IMMENSE PURCHASES GIVE HIM CONTROL OF THE GREEN TEA MARKET.

No Intention of Cornering the Product-Mr O'Donohne Mimply Couldn't Resist the Temptation for a Clever Business Stroke -At Least Sixty Thousand Package Bought Up in a Single Day.

Mr. Joseph J. O'Donohue, the "Coffee King," electrified the tea trade vesterday by purchasing an immense number of packages of green teas. The tea was bought from Fearon, Low &

Co., agent for rich Chins firms; Mosely Bros., who do a large banking and general commission business, and E. F. Phalen & Co., agents for Chinese firms. Lester, Cary & Co. , were the brokers.

According to some authorities interviewed this morning, this buys up all but 2,000 packages of this grade of teas in the market. Others placed the number of packages out at from 4.000 to 9.000.

Anyway, it is a big scoop for O'Donohue &

Tea is lower than ever before. This is the first time in many years that Mr. O'Donobue has dealt in teas. His forte is coffee. But he says he couldn't resist the temptation to buy at the present low rates at which tea rules.

The transaction has been given out as being 60,000 packages, and the price paid placed at $500,000. Mr. Cary told an Evening Wonth reporter this morning that no one could yet give the exact figures, but that they would doubtless exceed those given.

One half of the tea purchased is in transit,

This is by far the largest and boldest transaction of its kind on record,
Mr. O'Donolue stated positively to-day that he had no intention whatever of cornering the market—he did not do business that way. And Mr. O'Donohue's word is a good as his bond. The giant purchase is merely a bold and clever business stroke.

Mrs. Frederick W. Engels, whose paralytic husband eloped with the furniture to Long sland City yesterday during her absence from their apartments in the Sherman, 159 West Forty-eighth street, was interviewed by an EVENING WORLD reporter to-day.

Mrs. Engels, who is a blonde of thirty-two or so, declared the story that she maltreated hubby so, declared the story that she maltreated hubby was a horrid fib. They had sometimes indulged in biting sareasms, but on the whole they were perfectly lovely to each other. Mr. Engel's to other had enticed him away and she was going to see what she could do.

Engels is worth $200,000. His legs are paralyzed and he came to New York for treatment. He met Francesca Margueretta Oxonshel in November at the Rossmore Hotel, fell in love and was married.

Mr. Engels is seeleded in a room at Miller's Hotel, Long Island City. His children are with him, and orders that no one shall see him have been given by his lawyer, George L. Mott. To a reporter, who caught a glimpse of him, Mr. Engels looked the picture of misery and despair.

ISPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD, I Indianapolis, Feb. 9.—The most interesting of President-elect Harrison's visitors is Miss Bessie McAllister, the present Postmaster at Florence, Alabama. She made a pretty picture when she called on him yesterday afternoon.

She was treated cordially by the gallant General and thinks he is "just splendid."

She did not say exactly she wanted to be reappointed, but she made her mission known by saying she hoped the next President wouldn't "turn all the rascais out," which brought a hearty laugh from Mr. Harrison, and doubtless strengthened Miss McAllister's tenure of office.

Miss McAllister is therefore a Democrat by inheritance and surroundings, and says, in fact, she wouldn't be anything else and is not afraid to tell Gen. Harrison so.

She does not believe in civil-service reform though, and she does not mind it a bit if Gen. Harrison finds that out.

Civil service reform, she says, means that the victorious party shall have all the offices.

Miss Bessie, for that is her first name, was advised not to insist upon this point during her conversation with the President elect, as it might make her request for a reappointment seem not only inconsistent, but inconsiderate.
